FIDI RENTAL REPORT; TOUR A HISTORIC FLOATING HOME

Date: 09 Aug. 2012

Source: Curbed

FINANCIAL DISTRICT—While Manhattan rents hit a record high in May, rents in the Financial District increased even more than the average. Downtown real estate firm Platinum Properties released a report showing that rents increased in the area because of summer demand and a decrease in inventory. The average studio cost went up 1.7 percent to $2,698, while one- and two-bedroom rents both went up less than one percent, 0.98 percent to $3,724 and 0.07 percent to $5,543, respectively.
